From this altitude, the earth, a cross-section of my body:
every river a vein,
every stream a capillary,
every plot of land a muscle,
or maybe fat.

And I can see the way a continent can fit right up next to another, like my elbow loves the curve of my waist when I stand straight.